FOR NEW TRIAL

In the Deviney-Johnson Case Attorneys are Arguing.

MESSRS. MEYER AND HOWARD

Objected to the Motion for a New Trial, and Mr. Boyce Supported the Motion—Arguments will be Concluded This Morning by Congressman Dovener—Considerable Interest is Evincing in the Outcome.

Arguments on the motion of the defense in the Deviney-Johnson murder case, were begun yesterday morning in the criminal court, continued in the afternoon, and will be finished this morning. Mr. Sam O. Boyce opened for the defense, and was followed by Messrs. Meyer and Howard for the state, in opposition to the motion. This morning, the concluding argument of the case and defense will be given by Congressman B. B. Dovener. Messrs. Boyce and Dovener cannot see how a decision not to their liking can possibly be given by the court, and on the other hand Messrs. Meyer and Howard feel the same confidence that the motion will be overruled.

In his opening, Mr. Boyce said he would not argue the motion if it were not a matter of so much gravity. The bare introduction of a copy of Mr. Howard's address before the jury would decide the motion favorably from his point of view. He felt confident the verdict would be set aside, and cited several reasons, including errors in ruling by the court, illegal instructions by the state, refusal to continue the case, refusal to rule favorably on the application for a change of venue; further it was asked that the verdict be set aside for lack of proof that the defendants fired the fatal shot or shots. Insufficiency of the indictment was also cited. He said the newspaper accounts of the murder has prejudiced the public against the defendants, making a fair trial in this county impossible.

In conclusion, Mr. Boyce stated his objection to the part taken in the trial by Mr. John A. Howard, who had been associated with the prosecuting attorney. Mr. Boyce then took up passages in Mr. Howard's address to the jury, and said they were distinctly objectionable.

At the afternoon session, Mr. Meyer, the prosecuting attorney, opened for the state. He first took up Mr. Boyce's point that the court had erred in not granting a continuance on account of the absence of Annie Riley from the city. He replied with the assertion that court can exercise its discretion in deciding such a point, as it did do. Mr. Boyce's objections to state's instructions Nos. 3 and 5 he disposed of by referring to case of state vs. Hobbs, in which the same principle was at issue. As to No. 4, Mr. Boyce had objected for the reason that the instruction had defined first degree murder, a verdict for which, he claimed, could not be based on the indictment found against the prisoners. Mr. Meyer argued that if the indictment was good the instruction was good, too; there is no such thing as indicting for first or second degree murder. The indictment had been drawn in the form laid down by the law of the state. Supreme court decisions along this line were cited by the speaker. Mr. Boyce, said Mr. Meyer, had objected to the sixth instruction from the state, which stated in effect, if the jury believed that Deviney and Johnson followed the McLaughlins with the intent to kill them, and each aided and abetted in the crime, then the jury should find them guilty of murder in the first degree. Mr. Meyer referred to the testimony of the witnesses, Dixon, Comer and Kemp, and insisted that their testimony showed that Johnson and Deviney followed the McLaughlins up town, located them, and then followed them up and killed Charles McLaughlin.

Concluding, the prosecuting attorney referred with some sarcasm to the remarks Mr. Boyce had made relative to Mr. Howard's association with the state in the trial of this case. Mr. Meyer said he had been gratified to have associated with him such an able lawyer as Mr. Howard. There was nothing reprehensible as to Mr. Howard's connection with the case; he had been employed by citizens to co-operate with the state's attorney. Were another case of such gravity to come up, the speaker said he would, of his own motion, seek the aid of able counsel, in order to resist the very able counsel such as represented the defense in this case. He felt it to be his duty to do everything possible to protect and conserve the integrity, safety and welfare of the people of this community.

Court adjourned until 9:30 this morning, when Captain Dovener will close for the defense.
